Among many ladies' releases from last year, perhaps the most bittersweet was Patek's minimalistic manchette-styled Twenty~4. Considering what modern women demand from a watch, it fell just short. My heart went out to the rectangular design but not to the movement. Almost as if Patek heard my cry

I mentioned in that article that Seiko had several different lines and sub lines underneath those. The Seahorse subline was one such example and in today's models, it just so happens to sit within the Champion line. As this informative post tells us, the Champion line debuted in 1960 as a low cost group of manual wind pieces. As an aside, you

55 World's Best Luxury Watch Brands: The Ultimate Watch

This is the company behind both the world's thinnest manual wind watch and the world's thinnest automatic watch. Today, Piaget is known for its slim and pared-back designs—the last word in horological elegance. Piaget makes jewellery as well as watches and this might explain the brand's innate grasp of aesthetics.

Billions of years ago, the universe was created in a rapid expansion from a single point of nearly infinite energy, known as the Big Bang. In 2005, Jean-Claude Biver created a watch that ushered in a new era for Hublot, also called the Big Bang. In the spirit of one of those two events, Hublot created the aptly named Spirit of Big Bang - a more avant-garde expression of the line, featuring a
